How AI is Shaping India's Telecom Future

Neeraj Sethi

India's telecommunications transformation is accelerating as the country positions itself not just as a participant but as a global leader in next-generation digital infrastructure. Speaking at the International Bharat 6G Symposium, held alongside the India Mobile Congress 2025 (8-11 October 2025), Union Minister of Communications Shri Jyotiraditya Scindia affirmed that India is now developing sovereign capabilities across the strategic layers of future telecom networks.

"India is no longer just a consumer of technology. We strive to be the designers and creators of the future of technology. From our domestically developed 4G and 5G network technology stacks to open Radio Access Network (RAN) prototypes for 6G networks, we are developing independent capabilities across semiconductor chip design, secure network core infrastructure, satellite-based backhaul communication, and Artificial Intelligence (AI)-native networks," Minister Jyotiraditya Scindia said.

This forward-looking ambition is underlined by a new KPMG in India report released at IMC 2025, which reveals that 97% of global telecom operators are now assessing or adopting Artificial Intelligence (AI), with 49% already embedding AI into their daily operations. The report highlights the growing importance of agentic AI—intelligent systems capable of self-healing networks, predictive maintenance and hyper-personalised customer experiences—as a foundational capability for future telecom leadership.

Shaping India's digital future

"India will not just be vocal for local but local for global designing in India, solving in India and scaling for the world"

Shri Jyotiraditya M. Scindia

Union Minister of Communications, at IMC 2025

Crucially, India is emerging as a natural testbed for AI-driven telecom innovation, thanks to its unmatched digital scale: over 1.17 billion mobile connections and the world's highest monthly mobile data usage. According to KPMG, India offers unparalleled "scale and data richness" for AI innovation, putting the nation in a strong position to develop telecom platforms for global export.

The Minister noted that since its inception in 2023, the Bharat 6G Alliance—a coalition of over 80 organisations, 30 startups, and premier academic institutions—has become a hub of indigenous innovation.

"The seven working groups are pioneering AI-native networks for rural inclusion, and cross-sector applications in agriculture, healthcare, smart cities and sustainability," he said, adding that in just two years alliance members have filed over 200 patents and published more than 300 research papers internationally.

As India embraces its AI-led telecom roadmap, IMC 2025 served as a crucial platform bringing together policymakers, industry leaders, startups and global tech companies to shape India's 6G vision. With the world transitioning to intelligent networks powered by AI, India is strategically aligning itself to lead—not follow—the next era of digital connectivity.

Telecom Careers of the Future

Navigating 5G, 6G and AI-Driven Opportunities

Abhinav Srivastava

Historically, careers in the telecom sector focused largely on hardware installation, field maintenance and network troubleshooting. However, the industry is now moving towards software-led intelligent networks, driven by the adoption of 5G and 6G technologies, Artificial Intelligence (AI), and cloud-based network architecture. These advancements have expanded the telecom job market beyond traditional profiles, creating exciting new career pathways. According to industry insights, over 40% of telecom roles will require AI and automation literacy within the next three to five years.

Industry Growth Prospects

- India is projected to become the second-largest 5G ecosystem globally by 2027.
- Leading operators are making multi-billion dollar investments in AI integration, cloud networks and 5G and 6G services.
- BSNL and C-DOT are advancing indigenous telecom R&D under Make in India, generating fresh job opportunities in home-grown innovation.
- Global technology giants have expanded AI research and telecom R&D centres in India, resulting in high demand for skilled telecom-AI professionals.

New Wave of Careers

With 5G enabling ultra-low latency and high-speed connectivity, telecom players are expanding into next-generation digital services, creating new job functions:

- AR/VR-based digital learning and entertainment
- Smart factories and Industry 4.0 automation
- Autonomous drones and connected vehicles
- Telehealth, remote surgery and smart hospitals

This has increased demand for roles such as edge computing specialists, AI application developers, AR/VR engineers and digital platform architects. Moreover, with networks becoming cloud-native and globally interconnected, cyber threats are increasing. This has placed AI-powered cybersecurity at the core of telecom operations. Telecoms are hiring AI security analysts, telecom penetration testers, 5G security architects and threat intelligence specialists.

Hence, career opportunities in the telecom sector today are a blend of both traditional roles and newly emerging technology-driven positions.

Traditional Role	Description	Emerging Role	Description
Radio Frequency (RF) Planning Engineer	Designs and plans mobile network coverage and frequency usage to optimise signal strength.	Artificial Intelligence Network Optimisation Engineer	Uses artificial intelligence algorithms and machine learning models to predict network traffic, optimise performance and reduce network congestion.
Field Technician	Installs and maintains telecom hardware such as towers, routers and base transceiver stations.	Internet of Things (IoT) Network Deployment Specialist	Deploys smart sensors and IoT devices across telecom networks to support connected solutions for smart cities, healthcare, manufacturing and logistics.
Network Operations Centre (NOC) Support Engineer	Monitors network performance manually and resolves connectivity outages.	Cloud Network Operations Engineer	Manages cloud-hosted telecom infrastructure, automates network monitoring using artificial intelligence, and implements software-defined networking solutions.
Transmission Engineer	Manages fibre optic and microwave transmission systems for voice and data delivery.	Core Virtualisation Specialist	Works with virtualised Evolved Packet Core (EPC) and cloud-native 5G core networks on platforms like Kubernetes and Network Function Virtualisation (NFV).

Empowering Citizens and Industry...

Why Artificial Intelligence (AI) is Important for Telecom
Category	Key Area	Description
Technology Impact	Cybersecurity and Trust	AI helps protect networks from cyber threats and builds confidence in digital services.
	Future-Ready Networks	AI prepares India's telecom systems for advanced technologies like Sixth Generation (6G) networks.
Market & Innovation	Homegrown Innovation	Developing AI technologies within India reduces reliance on foreign systems and strengthens the local tech ecosystem.
	Global Opportunities	AI-enabled telecom solutions can be exported, opening new markets for Indian companies.
Societal & Economic Impact	Rural Connectivity	AI improves network reach and service quality in villages, supporting inclusive growth.
	Economic and Industrial Growth	Integrating AI in telecom infrastructure creates jobs, encourages industrial growth, and strengthens the digital economy.

Key Areas of AI Integration

Network Operations and Reliability: Telecom networks carry huge amounts of data, and the demand can change quickly—think of everyone streaming videos or making calls at the same time. Traditional systems that follow fixed rules cannot adjust fast enough to these changes. AI helps by predicting when and where demand will rise, automatically managing resources, and even fixing minor problems on its own. This means both city and rural users can enjoy smooth, uninterrupted connectivity.

Security and Fraud Control: As networks become more complex, they are also more vulnerable to cyberattacks, identity theft, and scam calls. AI can spot unusual activity as it happens and alert authorities or take action immediately. For example, it helps detect fake SIM cards, verifies user identities through KYC processes, and blocks scam calls. This keeps people safe and maintains trust in telecom services.

Customer Experience and Service Efficiency: People expect fast and reliable service when they contact telecom companies. AI-powered chatbots and virtual assistants can answer questions and resolve problems at any time of day, in multiple Indian languages. This not only makes services more accessible but also allows companies to handle more customers without needing to hire huge numbers of staff.

Infrastructure Planning and Network Expansion: Building new telecom infrastructure, like mobile towers and fibre networks, is expensive and complicated. AI can create a "digital twin" of the network—a virtual model that allows planners to test and simulate expansions before actually building them. This helps decide the best tower locations, fibre routes, and resource allocation, saving both time and money.

Evolution Towards 5G and Beyond: Next-generation networks, such as 5G and 6G, require ultra-fast speeds, precise control, and the ability to connect millions of devices at once. AI plays a central role here by managing spectrum use, coordinating data processing at the edge of the network, and directing traffic intelligently. This makes technologies like telemedicine, smart transport, connected cities, and secure defence communications possible.

Government Interventions and Policy Drivers

National Security and Cyber Resilience: The Department of Telecommunications (DoT) has operationalised AI to counter telecom-related fraud and misuse of digital identity systems. Through the Sanchar Sathi initiative, AI-powered analytics have detected and deactivated over 78 lakh mobile connections obtained through forged or suspicious identities. This strengthens national security and safeguards digital trust.

Global Standard Setting: India co-launched the Focus Group on Artificial Intelligence for Advanced Networks (FG-AI4G) with the International Telecommunication Union (ITU). This positions India as a standard-setter in AI-native 5G and 6G networks, promoting interoperability, ethical AI deployment, and trusted telecom supply chains.

C-DOT's Indigenous AI Capabilities: The Centre for Development of Telematics (C-DOT) has developed AI-based network security solutions for monitoring and anomaly detection. These indigenous capabilities reduce reliance on foreign vendors and enhance India's strategic control over critical communication infrastructure.

Sangam – Digital Twin Infrastructure Programme: Recognising the complexity of telecom expansion, the government launched the Sangam initiative, which uses AI-driven simulations to create digital twins of networks. This approach enables predictive capacity planning, rapid decision-making, and improved returns on public investment, underpinning initiatives such as BharatNet and 5G rollouts.

IndiaAI Mission – Funding Innovation and Skills: The IndiaAI Mission, backed by ₹10,371 crore, provides funding for AI research, GPU compute infrastructure, datasets, startup innovation, and workforce development. By connecting AI innovation with telecom policy, the mission cultivates domestic capabilities in AI-powered network management, analytics, and 6G research.

Opportunities Ahead for AI in Telecom
Opportunity Area	Description
Leadership in 6G and AI-Native Network Standardisation	India is co-authoring global standards for intelligent networks through ITU FG-AI4G and India-EU 6G Working Groups, embedding AI at the core of network design. This positions India as a rule-maker rather than a passive technology consumer.
Trusted Telecom Stack for Strategic Autonomy	Indigenous hardware, software, and AI platforms reduce foreign dependence. AI enables real-time threat intelligence, security analytics, and fraud prevention. C-DOT's AI-driven network management suite exemplifies technological sovereignty.
Export of AI-Powered Telecom Tools	AI-based telecom solutions, including fraud detection, spectrum efficiency tools, and digital twin planning software, are being prepared for deployment in emerging economies, particularly in Africa and Southeast Asia. This enhances India's geo-economic influence while generating revenue.
AI for Rural Development and Social Inclusion	Integrating AI with 4G/5G connectivity and satellite systems can transform rural service delivery in healthcare, education, agriculture, and financial inclusion, enabling telemedicine, personalised learning, agri-advisory services, and secure mobile banking.

Economic and Employment Impact

India's telecom sector is rapidly transforming into an intelligent, AI-driven digital ecosystem that is generating far-reaching socio-economic benefits. The integration of Artificial Intelligence (AI) with 5G and Open Radio Access Network (Open RAN) technologies is enhancing network efficiency, reliability, and security, while enabling advanced services that directly improve the quality of life for citizens. In rural and underserved areas, AI-driven connectivity solutions are facilitating access to healthcare through telemedicine, personalised education via digital learning platforms, modern agricultural advisory services, and secure financial inclusion, thereby fostering inclusive growth and reducing socio-economic disparities.

On the economic front, AI adoption in telecom is creating a diverse range of employment opportunities. Direct roles are emerging in AI development, data science, network engineering, software solutions, and immersive media, while indirect employment is growing across sectors such as logistics, IT services, manufacturing of telecom equipment, and digital content creation. Workforce upskilling programmes and professional training initiatives are equipping youth and professionals with the skills required to participate in this rapidly evolving ecosystem, ensuring that technological advancement translates into human capital development and broader social empowerment. Furthermore, the emphasis on indigenous AI platforms and homegrown technological solutions strengthens India's strategic autonomy, reduces reliance on foreign systems, and positions the country as a global hub for innovation.

Candidates in their own interest are advised not to fall prey to such false, baseless, misleading and exaggerated claims of these persons as IB do not share any input regarding the content of question papers of any Examination conducted by IB with anyone.

All the candidates must refrain from disclosing any update regarding their progression to various stages of recruitment or final selection on their personal/family/relative's/ friend's social media/media platforms.
